

Zoo and Wildlife

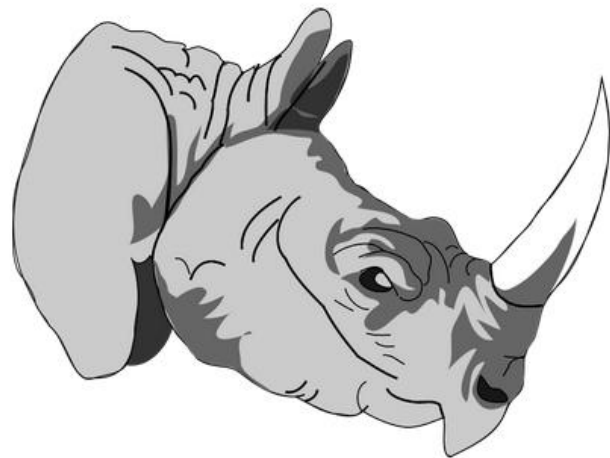

Zoo is short for Zoological Garden. Zoology means study of animals. Zoos are specially designed places where humans can safely observe some of the exotic and wild animals. Children in particular enjoy a variety of beautiful animals and birds. Some of the animals that are kept there are terrible predators. Which means they can kill and eat other animals, including humans. Some are gentle giants. Instead of visiting the whole world to see the creations of nature, you can visit a zoo just to do that.

Some of these animals are at a serious risk of extinction. It means if we do not take care of these animals, future generations will never be able to see them.

Some of the zoos are playing an important role in preserving these species by investing time, money and resources in research.
